The Monument.

The monument is made of the best Barre granite, and is a graceful and very beautiful piece of art. The shaft reats upon a bane twelve feet long, seven feet two inches wide, the total height, including the handsome bronze cagle with unfolded wings on the top, being twenty-two feet. The cagle bears in its beak not the laurel, emblematic of victory, but the olive branch, emblemate of peace. This was the idea of the Massachusetts veterans, which shows the restored re-

The site of the Massachusetts monument is a lot given to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by the owners of the Crater farm, at the request of A. P. Hill Camp, of Petersburg, Va. The lot fronts on the Jerusalem Plank Road, and is in the angle made by the lane from the Crater entering the road, being on the north side of the lane. It is about 500 yards west of the Crater, and is just across the road from where the historic Goe house stood at the time of the battle of the Crater, and is just across the road from where the historic Goe house stood at the time of the battle of the Crater, it will be remembered that it was from this Goe house that General Beauregard, Colonel W. Gordon McCabe and other officers with none's Brigade, and shook hands with each other when they saw the success of that charge.

The monument is not intended as a marker to locate any particular event or act, but the site is the most conspicuous on the whole farm, the lane
